

Avyakt BapDada 5th December 1974

What is the avyakt meeting? To become the same as the one you are meeting. So, to have an avyakt meeting means to adopt an avyakt form, the same as the Father's. Avyakt means where there is no feeling of the corporeal. Have you become like this?

Have you created a stage where there isn't the slightest attraction towards the physical country, the physical body, or physical things? The first promise you made is: "I listen to You alone and I speak to You alone". You have to fulfil this first promise. But, unless you stabilise yourself in the subtle or incorporeal stage for the whole day and night, would you be able to experience being with BapDada? That is, would you be able to fulfil your promise? Throughout the whole day, for how long do you fulfil this promise?

Whomsoever you are going to meet, you have to make your own stage according to their stage, and meet them at their place. You have to change both your place and your stage, for only then will you be able to fulfil this promise. To have corporeal feelings, or to have feelings of devotion for any person or any object - whereby you feel that this is very much loved or very good - to have this feeling for any physical object or bodily person is also like a desire. And, for as long as you have any desire, you are unable to oppose Maya completely. As long as you cannot oppose her (samna), you cannot become equal (samaan), that is, you cannot fulfil your promise.

In the pictures, Krishna has been portrayed as sitting on the globe of the world. So, create such an image of your practical stage. To go beyond this corporeal world, and your old body - to go beyond corporeal feelings and physical objects - means to be standing over them as a detached observer. When the globe is shown under someone's feet, or someone is shown sitting on the globe, then that is a portrayal of the mastery or right over the world.

Therefore, make such an image of yourself, where you only come into this old world - from the avyakt to the vyakt - according to your own desires, or on the basis of thoughts created by your own self, and not as a result of being subservient to the attraction of physical objects or people. When you take a lift up, the switch is under your own control as to whether you go to the first floor or the second floor. What is the result when the switch is beyond your control? You get stuck in-between. In the same way, keep the switch of your consciousness under your own control.

Have you claimed such rights, whereby you are able to set your place and stage how you want, when you want, and for as long as you want? Have you gained victory over time? "Kaal" means time. Are you victorious over time? If the Pandava Army and the Shakti Army only attain this stage at the end, then the power of silence is lower than the power of science, because science has already conquered these elements.

In the exhibition, you show pictures of how Ravan conquered the five elements, and time is shown as one of those elements. Since science, which is the power of Ravan, has conquered the elements quite a lot, then it means science is more powerful than you, does it not? The power of science is proving this in practice. Will the power of silence show its proof at the end? To conquer time means to conquer death.

The percentage of this is very low at the moment. Although you do stabilise yourself in the incorporeal stage or the avyakt stage, you are not able to stabilise yourself in that stage for as long as you want. You have the experience of that stage, you even work hard for it, but you are still not able to conquer time.

What is the reason for that? You think that you will sit in powerful remembrance for half an hour. You even sit for half an hour and also make plans, but you are not able to stabilise yourself in that stage for as long as the time you spend in thinking about that stage. You have the thought to push the button for the third floor, but, because you haven't conquered time, you are only able to reach the second floor, the first floor, or the ground floor. This is because you have the practice of wasting a lot of time throughout the day. By paying attention to the wasteful, you will become powerful and successful in gaining victory over time. As long as you waste a lot of time, you will not be powerful or successful in gaining victory over time. This is why you are not able to experience the meeting, or to constantly fulfil the promise that you want to.

So, now create your image, of the fortune of being constantly victorious over all the elements, and over time. Only when you change every second from wasteful to powerful will you be victorious. Achcha.

To such constantly victorious soul.. to those who have all rights, and who constantly fulfil their promise.. to those who change the wasteful into powerful, and who constantly remain beyond the corporeal and stabilise themselves in the avyakt stage.. to such lucky and close stars, love, remembrance, and namaste from BapDada.
